

MANHATTAN, Kan. – A fine dining steakhouse is set to elevate the Little Apple’s culinary landscape in 2027. Booth Creek Wagyu announced construction of a new restaurant, called The Garrison Room, will begin soon.

The steakhouse will source its beef exclusively from Booth Creek Wagyu, one of America’s largest vertically integrated Wagyu beef producers. Guests will enjoy a cozy and intimate environment that reflects the quality of the cuisine.

“Manhattan is a special community rooted in agriculture,” said Tyler Dreiling, managing partner. “This is a passion project that goes back before Booth Creek was founded.”

In addition to steaks, the restaurant will feature some classic beef-based entrees, including a signature burger, as well as a few seafood options. When in season, some produce and other ingredients will be sourced locally.

The Garrison Room will feature a private dining room, bar, and membership opportunities with unique perks, including private tours of Booth Creek Wagyu Ranch. It will be directly connected to a new Booth Creek meat market, which will replace the existing location across the street at 519 McCall Road.

The project is fueled by a desire to give Manhattan a fine-dining option that matches some of the most opulent restaurants in the region.

“The hospitable spirit in MHK is incredible,” Dreiling said. “Coach Bill Snyder came here for that reason, as he’s shared many times.

“I feel like part of hospitality is providing more options, especially to visitors. We’re surrounded by cattle here in the Flint Hills. Shouldn’t we have a local steakhouse where people take pride in knowing that their meal came from their own backyard?”

The name of the restaurant is a nod to the town of Garrison, which was abandoned and submerged under Tuttle Creek Lake when the Big Blue River was dammed in 1952. The community, located near present-day Booth Creek Wagyu Ranch in Pottawatomie County, was founded in 1879 and had 400 residents at its peak.

“It’s a story that not many people have heard,” Dreiling said. “We’re excited to share it, and I think it adds a lot of character to what we’re doing.”

The Garrison Room plans to open in the first half of 2027.
